

Makoto Hatori was born in Japan in 1947. He apprenticed under a master of traditional Japanese ceramics in 1970 and 1974. Following the completion of his bachelor's degree in sculpture at the Nihon University College of Art in 1972, he went on to research clay and glazes at the Gifu Prefectural Institute of Ceramics, 1972–1974. In 1975, he established his own ceramics studio in Tamatukuri, Ibaraki Prefecture, with a traditional firing kiln that he designed. While running this studio between 1975 and 2006, he produced traditional ceramics and exhibited them nationally. In 2007, he relocated his studio to Moriya, Ibaraki Prefecture, where he has been ever since. Since 1978, he has been selected for numerous international exhibitions and won awards across the globe, including in Italy, Great Britain, New Zealand, Egypt, Belgium, Germany, Lithuania, the U.S.A., Croatia, South Africa, Australia, Taiwan, Estonia, Korea, Spain, Hungary, Slovenia, France, Romania, Turkey, Latvia and Poland. In 1992, he taught ceramics at the Manchester Polytechnic (now Manchester Metropolitan University) in the Department of Art and Design. Between 1994 and 1996, he was a member of the Contemporary Applied Arts in England. He has been invited to participate in a number of international symposia and conferences, including the International Ceramic Symposium by the Lithuania Panevezys City Council in 1996 and 1998; Earth and Fire by the Craft Potters Association of Great Britain in 1997; the International Woodfiring Symposium at the International Ceramics Studio, Hungary, in 2006; and the 2nd ICMEA (International Ceramic Magazine Editors Association) Conference at Fuping Pottery Art Village, Fuping, Shaanxi, China, in 2007. In addition to participating in international exhibitions, Hatori has contributed numerous critical essays to major international ceramic magazines. Some of these reviews have been quoted in other literature.
